

tomorrows

are more important than ever

Today is uncertain, but tomorrow represents hope and promise...

Today is uncertain, but tomorrow represents hope and promise. COVID-19 has quickly and profoundly changed our daily lives. Schools have now closed for face-to-face learning through the end of the year. As unsettling as the past few weeks have been to us as adults, consider the impact this is having on thousands of young people who are at home.

To support our young people, Junior Achievement USA is offering online resources for free to teachers, parents and young people at www.JA.org/Tomorrows. We are doing this so that our children can spend more time planning for and dreaming about tomorrow, and less time worrying about today.

Many of our education partners have been grasping for solutions to provide educational opportunities for their students at home. JA responded immediately and continues to respond with educational materials made available online to education partners and parents struggling to give their kids direction at home. Materials include traditional programming converted into formats which can be used by teachers or parents to guide their students through materials or pre-recorded virtual volunteers leading sessions kids can access themselves.

Regionally, a JA Online Career Speaker Series with short, impactful videos of individuals talking about their South Carolina careers will be organized into the 16 career clusters/pathways. JA is connecting with educators and other youth development organizations and libraries to insure access. How can you help?

Share

Please share the www.JA.org/Tomorrows link with any teachers or parents you may know. For example: send to your local educators, friend, family and if appropriate, send to your co-workers. A recent JA board member did just that, sending the link to 700 members of his company.

Volunteer

Consider giving your time as a virtual JA volunteer through the JA Online Career Speaker Series.

Consider Becoming a JA Tomorrows Fund Donor

We are delivering content in new ways so our children can spend more time planning for and dreaming about tomorrow, and less time worrying about today. Your support during this critical time will help make that possible. Consider becoming a Tomorrows Champion with a gift to support the hope and promise of tomorrow which sustains us today.
